

Subway in Rio

Taking the Metro

The subway runs from 5am to midnight Monday through Saturday and 7am to 11 pm on Sunday and holidays. The Metro is best to use when trying to access areas from Copacabana through to Downtown Rio. It is considered the safest way to travel and has very clean and air-conditioned stations and subway cars. Expect it to be crowded during rush hours just like any other big city.

Finding Your Way

There are maps in the subway stations to help you navigate the system. If you are a woman you have the option of traveling on the last train marked in pink as no men are allowed, only in rush hours and during the week.

The Main Lines

The first line serves several places in south zone like Botafogo, Flamengo, Copacabana and downtown. The second line has Maracanã station where you can find UERJ. A recent change in 2009 has lines one and two traveling together from Sao Cristovao until Botafogo. Remember, that line 1 travels from General Osorio to Saens Pena and line 2 runs from Botofogo to Pavuna. Be sure you are not getting on the wrong line.

Before taking the subway it is advisable to obtain a map from your hotel and familiarize yourself with the different routes. This way it will not seem so confusing once you reach the subway station.
