Computing activity in scientific research has always been closely related to the progress in the computing industry and, even more recently, with IT companies. This has been a win-win collaboration: On one hand research depends upon the great advances from industry, such as the design of CPUs and GPUs; on the other hand the Web and HTTP, while invented for and by high energy physics, have played a leading role in the development of today's digital economy. At present stage, new Machine Learning techniques and services are being invented in industry and making their way back into particle physics.

The ACAT workshop series is, therefore, welcoming the participation and sponsorship of the industry. Please contact us at acat-loc2022@cern.ch with inquiries! Depending on the level it is possible to have a desk out in the common area with a roll-up, introduction at the dinner, and logo on the conference website.

21st International Workshop on Advanced Computing and Analysis Techniques in Physics Research

The 21st International Workshop on Advanced Computing and Analysis Techniques in Physics Research (ACAT 2022) will take place between Monday 24th and Friday, 28th October, 2022 at the Villa Romanazzi Carducci in Bari, Italy.

The 21st edition of ACAT will – once again – bring together computational experts from a wide range of disciplines, including particle-, nuclear-, astro-, and accelerator-physics as well as high performance computing. Through this unique forum, we will explore the areas where these disciplines overlap with computer science, fostering the exchange of ideas related to cutting-edge computing, data-analysis, and theoretical-calculation technologies.

AI meets Reality:

The theme of ACAT 2022 will reflect the increasing adoption of AI and ML techniques as standard tools in science and beyond. This use in real production workflows shows both successes and new challenges.
