Old Town of Kotor

Being listed as UNESCO World Heritage Site, the Old Town of Kotor attracts great number of visitors throughout the year.

Kotor is situated in the most secluded part of Boka Kotorska (The Bay of Kotor). While it dates from the Illyrian period, Kotor developed into an important commercial and artistic centre in the Middle Ages.

Many empires battled for control over the city throughout the centuries: from being an autonomous city of the Byzantine Empire, free city of medieval Serbia, then under Venetian or Hungarian states, gaining independence and then returned to Venetian control once again, just to be occupied by France and then Austria, until Kotor finally became part of Yugoslavia.

All of these periods made a clear mark in the town's architecture, and this unique architectural mixture and atmosphere were the main reasons for Kotor being listed as UNESCO World Heritage Site.
