What is CHIPP?

de fr it en

Member of SCNAT

Swiss Institute of Particle Physics (CHIPP)

CHIPP is an association uniting researchers active in particle, astroparticle and nuclear physics in Switzerland. It strengthens the Swiss participation in international projects and committees, coordinates research and teaching activities in Switzerland, and promotes public awareness of the field.

What is CHIPP?

CHIPP Plenary meeting 2021 in Spiez

[...] regrouping all the particle, astroparticle, and nuclear physicists holding a Master in physics and working for a Swiss institution, as well as the Swiss PhD nationals working at CERN.

CHIPP is...

- helping towards a successful participation of Swiss groups in international projects
- advising the Universities/ETHs on vacant professorships and academic strategies, and coordinate teaching activities
- ensuring a proper Swiss representation in relevant national and international bodies
- promoting public awareness on particle, astroparticle and nuclear physics

Who's an ECR and who are the CHIPP ECR Liaisons?
