

How to get to UERJ

BY METRO

Taking the Metro

The subway runs from 5am to midnight Monday through Saturday and 7am to 11 pm on Sunday and holidays. The Metro is best to use when trying to access areas from Copacabana through to Downtown Rio. It is considered the safest way to travel and has very clean and air-conditioned stations and subway cars. Expect it to be crowded during rush hours just like any other big city.

Find your way

There are maps in the subway stations to help you navigate the system. In 2006, all the signs were changed to include English as well as Portuguese. If you are a woman you have the option of traveling on the last train marked in pink as no men are allowed, only in rush hours and during the week.

The Main lines

The first line serves several places in Zona Sul (south zone) of Rio de Janeiro like Copacabana, downtown, and Tijuca. The second line has stops for Maracana stadium, the zoo and Rio State University - LISHEP and then goes to the suburbs. A recent change in 2009 has lines one and two traveling together. Remember, that line 1 travels from Jardim Oceanico to Saens Pena and line 2 runs from Botafogo to Pavuna. Be sure you are not getting on the wrong line.

Before taking the subway it is advisable to obtain a map from your hotel and familiarize yourself with the different routes. This way it will not seem so confusing once you reach the subway station.

By metro, you must drop off at Maracanã station and exit by the ramp over Radial Oeste Avenue. Go until a bifurcation when you take the right to go to UERJ.

Once inside UERJ, you will see on the left the amphitheater and on the right the ecumenical chapel and LISHEP 2023 auditorium.

How to get to UERJ BY TAXI

By taxi, coming from zona sul, you will drop off at São Francisco Street, 524 and walk inside the campus through the "Portão 5" (Gate 5) access.

Follow to the UERJ entrance

Follow through the indicated ramp and you reach the elevator's hall

Keep walking to the other build's exit

Then, you will see the ecumenical chapel on the left. Welcome to LISHEP 2023 auditorium.
