

Engineering a 2-Colour Compact Rubidium Optical Clock for Space

The physics and parts of the design of a 2-colour rubidium optical clock for application in space is presented. The design targets a size weight and power of 20 L, 20 kg and 100 W. The clock aims to meet performance requirements necessary for operation in global navigation satellite systems.

Primary author: SCARABEL, Jordan (QuantX Labs)

Co-authors: LUITEN, Andre (Institute for Photonics and Advanced Sensing, University of Adelaide); PERRELLA, Chris (University of Adelaide); LOCKE, Clayton (QuantX Labs); AHERN, Emily; Mr HARRIS, Geoff (QuantX Labs); Mr GRAY, James (QuantX Labs); O'CONNOR, Martin (QuantX Labs); Mr BURNS, Matthew (QuantX Labs); BOURBEAU HÉBERT, Nicolas (Institute for Photonics and Advanced Sensing, University of Adelaide); SCHOLTEN, Sarah (Institute for Photonics and Advanced Sensing, University of Adelaide); NG, Sebastian (QuantX Labs); Dr NGUYEN, Thanh-Long (QuantX Labs); Mr OOI, Yong (QuantX Labs)

Presenter: SCARABEL, Jordan (QuantX Labs)

Track Classification: Miniature, Portable and Space Systems