Q2-1. If you want to give descriptions on your collaborations in A3D3:

2 responses

I collaborated with two institutes other than my home institute. My major research project was largely conducted with another institute. Even though my collaborations happened virtually, it was useful for me.

We collaborate across different areas to achieve bigger goals.

Q2-2. What would you expect from A3D3 to encourage you to engage in collaborations in A3D3?

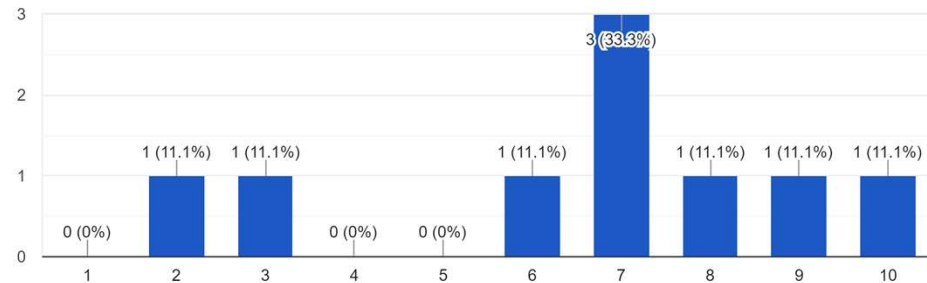

2 responses

A more cohesive webpage so A3D3 members and their current research are easily accessible, which would increase virtual connections

There must be manpower only for collaborations within A3D3. The main caveat for collaborations is that everyone already has their own work so people do not have time to work on collaborations.

Q3. Do you find events from A3D3 (e.g. monthly seminars, meetings, ...) are helpful to you? Or would you want to participate in?

Attend/present at monthly seminars. Uncertain how useful it is for the audience, but the practice is helpful to me.

Being able to present at the all hands meeting is a great way to get more experience!

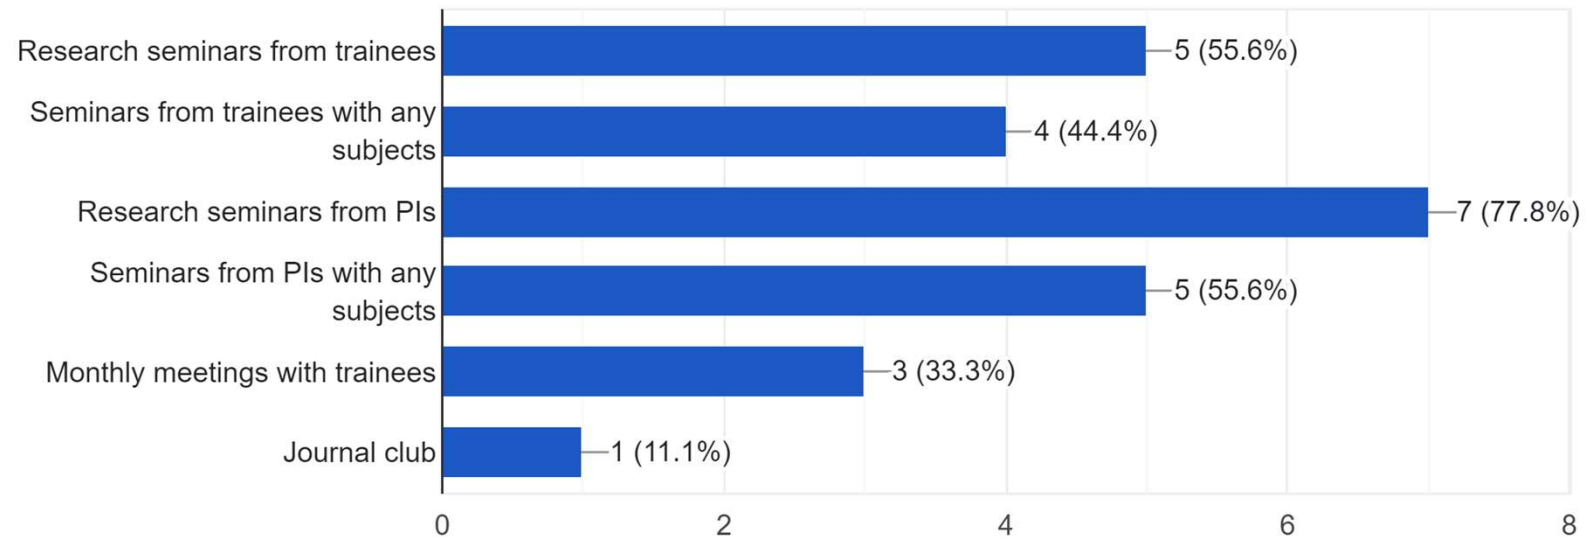

Q3-2. What kind of events from A3D3 would you want to participate in?

1 response

the talks are great, but I think trainings/workshops would be beneficial for students and young professionals.

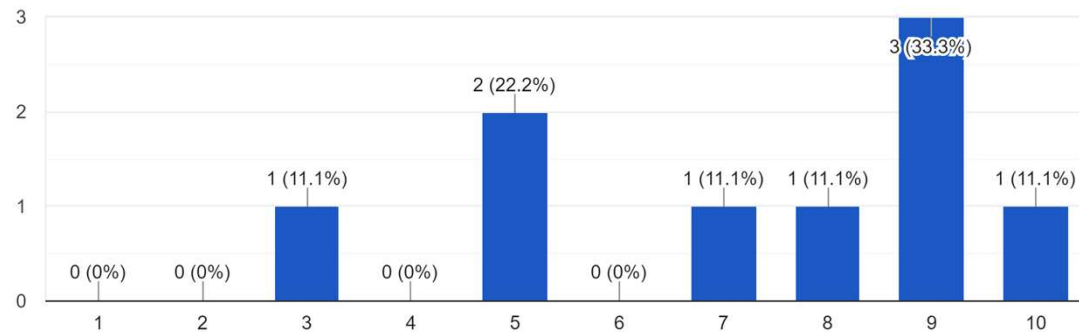

Q4. If there are monthly trainee-led events, what would you want?

Q5-1. If you want to give descriptions on how A3D3 is helpful for your next careers:

2 responses

I've been doing a lot of logistics/administrative work with A3D3 recently, which is helping me further develop my interpersonal skills and serving as a form of networking. I think that these kinds of soft skills will come in handy no matter what my future looks like.

Aided me in exploring interesting areas of research, leading to publications

Q5-2. What would you expect from A3D3 to help you for your next careers?

1 response

A3D3 could potential provide some connection to broad community for job opportunities, or some platform for exchange information for job opportunities in both industry and academia.
