- If people are turning away from Facebook, it is not because the company has overreached or gone over to the dark side.
- It is because we have come to realise people are boring.
- the problem might be that our posts are too real, and that reality is not worth our time
- scrolling down the news feed and "liking" 15 items in one sitting. I'm marking my presence, like a dog.

Apple said:

'All iOS devices have built-in controls that give parents and guardians the ability to restrict access to content, such as internet access and age-rated content. Parental controls also give parents and guardians the option to turn off functionality, such as purchasing from iTunes, and the ability to turn off in-app purchases.'

- "like" means you reinforce your own ideas, no longer are you exploring different ideas.
- Political polarisation

Am I getting too old?

- I could stay on an old computer+OS
- But progressively I could no longer cooperate ("Sophie syndrome").
