

Contribution ID: 138

Type: plenary talk

Dark Matter Direct Detection

Physicists are still looking for what makes up most of our galaxy, and while there may be some hints, dark matter still has not been conclusively observed in the lab. I will present the current status of direct dark matter detection and the direction in which this research is headed.

Primary author: Dr NIKKEL, James (Royal Holloway University of London)

Presenter: Dr NIKKEL, James (Royal Holloway University of London)

Track Classification: Particle Astrophysics, Current and Future