

The nations rise from poverty is fueled by fossil fuel fuels. Current nuclear power technology is unable to capture majority of these new markets. Perhaps entirely different approach to nuclear energy is necessary to compete with other energy resources, provide inherent passive nuclear safety, and consume actinides from legacy spent nuclear fuel. Several new approaches to nuclear power, which aim to accomplish these aims, will be presented.