

Precision Mechanics / Systems Aspects

Andrea Catinaccio, Antti Onnela

CERN

This lecture highlights subjects to be addressed when designing, constructing, installing and operating a high-precision instrument: from the initial requirements to the final use. Case examples, with lessons learned, are taken of the recently completed high-precision tracking detector systems of the CERN LHC experiments.