

Perspective on future challenges for very high energy hadron colliders

Vladimir N Litvinenko

Department of Physics and Astronomy, Stony Brook University

In this talk I'll discuss the accelerator physics and technology challenges arising from demands for future very high-energy high-luminosity hadron collider. I'll try to separate fundamental limitation and technical challenges from the cost limitations and to present areas of R&D relevant R&D.