

Scheduling beams at CERN

The new AD central timing

- A new central timing model have been developed and proved its value in the operation.
- Proper decomposition of the system (concentrate and enclose domain knowledge within subsystems) simplifies it, and allows much quicker introduction of the newcomers to the system. This has been proven when we reused the model and its implementation to provide a new central timing for ELENA