

Contribution ID: 139

Type: not specified

Constraining “Non Orthodox” Symmetrons

Cosmological symmetrons are usually assumed to have the symmetry breaking phase transition at low redshifts. In this talk I will explore the implications of relaxing (in a reasonable way) this assumption and I will present some preliminary constraints on such theories from cosmological data. I will also show some interesting features of the symmetron model from black holes physics.

Primary author: ZUCCA, Alex (Simon Fraser University)

Presenter: ZUCCA, Alex (Simon Fraser University)

Session Classification: Afternoon session