

Rethinking Institution Security Approach

Sunday 8 October 2017 11:45 (25 minutes)

Usually in organizations there is often a CISO who is in charge of the IT security of the company. CISOs are not a member of any particular section of the company. IT security in practice can be seen from different points of view depending on the people involved in a specific project. Even in security by default, section interests may collide. In ALBA there is an inter-section group called IT Security Coordination group that tries to gather all the different aspects of the security from the different sections of the Computing Division and to propose the measures to be deployed.
