France most skeptical country about vaccine safety

By Jon Cohen | Sep. 8, 2016 , 7:15 PM

The French had less confidence in the safety of vaccines than the residents of 66 other countries recently surveyed by researchers.

A team lead by anthropologist Heidi Larson of the London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine conducted what it contends is "the largest survey on confidence in immunization to date," interviewing more than 65,000 people. As the researchers report online in EBioMedicine today, 41% of respondents in France disagreed with
