

I am Thomas Mons. I am currently doing a master experimental physics at Utrecht University in the Netherlands.

For my summer student project I am part of the LHCb group, looking into rare decays. My favourite part of my experience as summer student is meeting and working with physicists from all around the world.

Next year I will be working on my master thesis on nuclear modulation, and after that I would like to find a PhD position.