lowland gorilla; Critically endangered indochinese tiger.

Features two immersive museums

The era of looking at specimens through glass and exhibition cabinets has passed. Rare collections "jump" out of the glass window, and the convention of holding exhibitions with visitors at zero distance has been realized. Among all the exhibits, the "true spirit of the great rivers" is fully reflected in this aspect. The "true spirit of the great rivers" tells the story of how the world's top ten rivers gave birth to life and how biological populations spread, migrated and communicated, presenting a series of wonderful stories. The exhibition area mainly displays the biodiversity of the world's representative rivers.

Features three leading science and technology museums

It's hard to tell if you're traveling or visiting a smart museum. The most intimate design is that, in addition to the screen explanation, there are fossil templates placed here for you to teach children on the spot! There was a sudden restlessness over the lifelike exhibits! High-tech will be the natural evolution of the process of complete in front of you. The journey of seeing, hearing, touching, smelling and smelling all the senses opens up an unprecedented immersive viewing experience.
