Today machines have already shown glimpses of creativity in art, literature and music. As AI develops, completely new forms of the arts, currently unimaginable, are bound to emerge. I will explore this brave new world, probing questions like, Will computers be creators like us and even go beyond us? Will we have to rethink concepts like “art” and “creativity” and, if so, how? I will discuss all this and much, much more.